

Belmont Primary School Newsletter February 26th 2021

Dear Parents / Carers,

I very much hope that you all managed to have an enjoyable half term and like us, have been lifted by the news that all children will be expected to return to school on Monday 8th March.

Full Reopening of School

Earlier this week, I shared an outline of how the full return would work and in all honesty, it will be largely 'business as usual' with our risk assessment remaining the same, along with the routines we have adopted since September. Next week I will be sending the final details with reminders of start and finishing times (which will not have been changed since all children were last in school).

I am sure that most of you will be pleased that this will signal the end of 'remote education', something which so many of you have embraced with such positivity evident from the responses I have seen on the 'Teams' platform. Could I please ask that, even though the 'end is in sight', momentum is maintained up until the end of next week.

World Book Day

As the letter earlier this week explained, we will be inviting children to dress in the guise of a favourite book character next Thursday and I know that there are virtual class meetings arranged to allow everybody the opportunity to view the endeavours of their friends and classmates (and possibly even the teachers...!).

That is pretty much it for this week. A bit brief I know but I can say with certainty that I am very much looking forward to Monday 8th March. I sense I am not alone in this!

Wishing you all a pleasant weekend; it looks like being a good one!

Yours Sincerely

Mr C Gibson
